

How to find information on architects

To find information (text and images) related to architects or architectural firms you can use both print and electronic resources.

Dictionaries and encyclopedias can be a good starting point. They contain brief authoritative information and often some bibliographic citations. They also can help to put a particular architect or group of architects into historical and cultural context.

All dictionaries and encyclopedia are located in the Reference section: \(aisles 1 and 2 in the Architecture Library\)

General histories of art and architecture (Sir Banister Fletcher's History of Architecture; Marvin Trachtenberg's Architecture: From Pre- history to Post-Modernism; Kenneth Frampton's Modern Architecture: a critical history, etc.) provide information on architects and often some bibliographical sources.

Monographs offer the most complete information on an architect or group of architects. How to find a book tutorial can help you to conduct your research. If you are looking for a specific publication you can check its availability in the library by searching the online catalog. If you do not know the exact title or author's name search by using the architect's name (last name first) or architectural firm's name as a Subject . Put the architect's name as an Author to find books written by him/her.

It is really helpful if you know all possible spellings of an architect or a firm's name. (Check the Union List of Artists Names to find different versions of name spelling).

Very often articles are the only source available, especially when you are looking for information on recent events and new names in the field of architecture.

To locate articles search Periodical Databases. NJIT has access to various indexes: Avery Index, Art Abstracts, Art Index, Architectural Index, American Humanities Index, which provide you with information on where and when a specific article was published. Databases Academic Search Premier, EbscoHost, OmniFile, J-Store, Project Muse, Lexis-Nexis Academic Universe, give you citations and often full text articles (check each database for full-text coverage). Learn more about searching databases by reading their "Help" sections and our online tutorials: How to search Avery Index and How to find an article.

Web resources, which are growing rapidly can also be used for finding information on architects and architectural firms.

ProFile – the architects' sourcebook.

Online directories of practices – RIBA (Royal Institute of British Architects).

Brief biographies of American architects who died between 1897-1947.

Biographical database of women in architecture from the IAWA (International archive of women in architecture).

Many architectural firms have their own websites that include biographical and other data on their principal architects. To find these sites search the YAHOO directory of architectural firms.

Architectural Information Portals created in various countries can help to locate information on architecture worldwide.
